

A MAN WITH ONE OF THOSE FACES

I don't want the typical design of a book in the crime genre as mine has that quirky comedy element and I'm not trying to hide it. I've enclosed pictures of some covers I think probably reflect my book more. As the title is long, images as in the samples shown below with the name dominating the front cover is certainly an option but obviously that is only one of many. Another would be any variations featuring the outline of a head as it would fit with the name. Again, I am much keener on drawn than anything using photos. My central character is a small time conman who takes advantage of the fact that he often gets confused for other people. He is down on his luck so definitely not suit and tie. Think late 20s for age. The fact that he is often confused for other people because he is the exact average of the typical Irish male is a factor in the book - so feel free to experiment with ideas around him having identity issues - i.e. not really knowing who he is because he is always pretending to be somebody else.

CAIMH MCDONNELL - one of many. Another would be any variations featuring the outline of a head as it would fit with the name. Again, I am much keener on drawn than anything using photos. My central character is a small time conman who takes advantage of the fact that he often gets confused.
