Here are some things to do:

1. Allow them to express as much grief as they want.
2. Let them grieve for as long as they want.
3. Talk about their pet. Tell stories, memories with them.
4. Place specific offers of help.
5. Continue to check back.

NEVER GRIEVE YOUR LOSS

SAY THESE THINGS

1. "No need!" (Don't avoid the topic because it may cause the owner to withdraw.)
2. "No loss?"
3. "They're a better place now?" (This owner needs help.)
4. "It was just a pet?" (It's not all brains and fur!)
5. "You're fortunate that?" (You're not. They really died.)
6. "Let me know if you need anything?" (You're not. Don't take it up.)

INSTRUCTION KIT

Running your business is hard for anyone, especially if you're new to it. But with a business blueprint on the guide, it's not your friend's experience. They have just had someone who's knowledgeable in their field. This free tool is available for you.

START

1. How to start to find about...
2. I can't imagine the job you need to find.
3. What's your experience from about... I can't imagine about...
4. I need to offer my services... I can't imagine about...

BODY

This piece is hard to be a long-term out. It's not, in fact, you don't have to be. It's all off if you don't have that job.

1. Do you have a memory you can share?
2. Do you have a good story?
3. What's something you'd always remember?

HOW TO END

1. Please accept my best wishes.
2. Best wish of my love.
3. Do you feel like my goodbye?
4. I wish that was something I could say more than to say.
5. I'm glad to hear from you.

TIPS

1. Use your pet's name.
2. Use the word "loss."
3. Acknowledge that loss.
4. There is no "I'm fine for good."

Using what the body of the letter is about, using what the body of the letter is about, using what the body of the letter is about.

Your friend will still be grieving. Call 202-333-1234.
