CREDIT SCORE RANGES AND THEIR MEANING

499 and Lower Very Bad Severe credit issues are present, making loans difficult to obtain and very costly. Improving credit before applying for loans is highly recommended.	680 - 699 (Good) Good Average score range with easy loan approvals but slightly higher interest rates. A score above 720 is recommended for better long-term loan terms.
500 - 579 (Bad) Bad Loan terms are very unfavorable, and caution is advised to avoid entering the financial situation.	700 - 799 (Very Good) Very Good This range covers 31% of the US population. Loan approvals are almost assured with favorable rates.
580 - 619 (Poor) Poor Loans are obtainable but with high interest rates and less favorable terms.	800 and Higher (Excellent) Excellent With this score, loan approvals are guaranteed, and the lowest possible interest rates are offered. Achieving this requires financial discipline and a good credit history.
620 - 679 (OK or Fair) Fair/Fair-Plus Loan approvals are possible, but rates and terms may not be the best.

YOUR PATH TO IMPROVED CREDIT

Credit Repair Takes Time Improving credit doesn't happen overnight as it takes years to rebuild a credit profile.	Multiple Attempts Some credit repair services may require multiple attempts to resolve issues.
Strategic Disputes Disputing errors on credit reports can help improve credit scores, but it's important to understand the process and when to use it.	Client Portal Updates Real-time updates on credit status through a client portal.
Response Time It takes 30-45 days for bureaus and creditors to respond to credit disputes, with extra time for challenging or disputing credit reports.	Long-Term Credit Health The program doesn't only aim to improve credit but also teaches how to maintain a good credit score.
